Overview

Ashley applies the power of law to protect the planet by promoting sound science, striving to protect public health and the environment. Ashley focuses her practice on complex environmental contamination litigation. She has represented clients before municipal boards, state committees, and state and federal courts, and in federal courts of appeal.

She has represented or currently represents the following states in litigation against the manufacturers of PFAS (per- and poly-fluoroalkyl substances): California, Hawai‘i, Maryland, New Hampshire, New Mexico, North Carolina, Ohio, Oregon, Rhode Island, Washington, and Wisconsin. She has worked on hundreds of other similar cases brought on behalf of public water systems across the country. She currently serves on several plaintiff committees of the Aqueous Film-Forming Foam Multi-District Litigation (MDL No. 2873). She is co-chair of the sovereign subcommittee and water provider subcommittee.

Ashley has been recognized as a Super Lawyer, Super Lawyer Rising Stars, and was honored with the New Hampshire Bar Association’s Pro Bono Honor Roll, and Union Leader’s 40 Under Forty, Class of 2018. When Ashley isn’t working to protect our planet, you can find her getting muddy on some trails, training for an ultra-marathon or fostering dogs with the organization Rescued Ohio.
